invites you to

The Climate Crisis and American Health: Turning from Threat to Opportunity

Joel Charles, M.D./M.P.H.

7 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 17, 2015

Crossroads at Big Creek
2041 Michigan St., Sturgeon Bay

Charles will discuss the most recent findings on climate change, how it will affect our health and how current energy practices impact health. He will offer clear policy prescriptions and suggest actions that health professionals and others can take to address these issues.

Joel Charles is a family medicine resident in Santa Rosa, California, who in his Master of Public Health program focused on the health impacts of climate change. He advocates for responsible climate policy and is helping build a network to give health professionals efficient, effective ways to make health a central piece of the climate change conversation.
